Winter Showcase

SYDNEY YOUTH ORCHESTRAS

Sat 25 June

Verbruggen Hall

Sydney Conservatorium of Music

Welcome

We come together today in a formal concert venue for the first time in exactly twelve months! It is so great to see you and to hear the orchestras back doing what they do best.

Live performance is a unique and somewhat unquantifiable beast. Why attend a live concert when one can logon online and find hundreds of outstanding recordings of a work played by the world's great orchestras? The answer is quite simple really; live performance is one of the greatest (if not the greatest!) expressions of human creativity that we have. A profound connection between the audience who are transported momentarily from their everyday reality, the composer who is often speaking through the performer from centuries past and the performer channelling the composer by means of years of practice, rehearsal and up to ten brain processes per second all whilst remaining perfectly synchronised with their multitude of orchestral colleagues.

Music also has the power to speak where worlds fail as Hans Christian Anderson so beautifully put it. Today we see at least two powerful examples of this; "Movement for Rosa" is a musical representation of the life of Rosa Parks, the great civil rights advocate of the 20th century of whom Martin Luther King Jr. said "Rosa Parks, whose creative witness was the great force that led to the modern stride toward freedom" and "Shostakovich's 5th Symphony", one of the cornerstones of 20th Century music and of which much has been written about its genesis and true meaning though in the forty-minute ovation and open weeping that was experienced at the work's premiere we possibly find the human truth of the work.

We are so pleased to welcome back to the Sydney Youth Orchestras family a member of the original 1973 SYO, Stephen Williams as Conductor of the Sydney Youth Philharmonic.

Enjoy all of today's performance and thank you for your ongoing support of Sydney Youth Orchestras.
